

Case Study

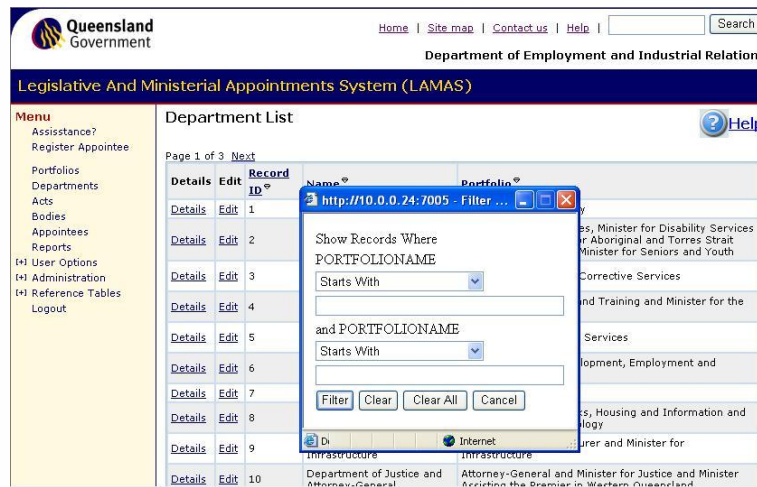

Queensland Government

The Queensland Department of Employment and Industrial Relations (DEIR) has a whole-of-Government agency role in capturing and reporting information on the board and committee members covering the remuneration of part-time appointees. Connexion developed the Legislative and Ministerial Appointments System (LAMAS) to assist the DEIR to manage the information relating to over 600 active boards and committees with over 3,000 members.

The Solution

Client	Queensland Department of Employment and Industrial Relations (DEIR)
Issue	Maintaining currency of the member records across the Queensland Government was time consuming and labour intensive.
Source	The collection of data was being gathered through various databases at different times causing the information to be inconsistent.
Solution	Implement a single web-enabled database to amalgamate all member records.
Result	A more streamlined, efficient, consistent and accurate system to record all the information that is required by the DEIR and stakeholder agencies to fulfil their responsibilities.

Advanced Filtering function allows DEIR users to efficiently source a specific record.
